

2006

American Humane hosted its first differential response conference. Differential response is an approach that allows child protective services to respond differently to each child abuse report, depending on the severity of the abuse, the family's history and other factors. To address growing issues in child welfare, American Humane established the Immigration and Child Welfare initiative and the Fatherhood initiative.

The American Red Cross and American Humane renewed a groundbreaking agreement to provide for mutual cooperation between the two organizations in the emergency relief of domestic animals, the assurance of their care, and the search for their owners.

Following devastating wildfires in Texas, which burned more than 1 million acres, Red Star responded with food, supplies, and medical attention for burned and displaced horses and cattle.

AHA History 2006 -hosts its First DIFFERENTIAL RESPONSE CONF & establishes Immigr-CW and "The Fatherhood Initiative" Shot 2017-02-14 at 1.52.59 PM.png

American Humane held its first Differential Response conference. Differential Response is an approach that allows child protective services to respond differently to each child abuse report depending on the severity of the abuse, the family's history, and other factors.

Addressing Racial Disproportionality while helping perpetuate Gender Disproportionality (common to certain organizations and programs, too).

2007

American Humane established the Child Protection Research Center to address long-standing issues related to the improvement of public child protective services. The Center examines the child welfare system's racial disproportionality, among other issues.